Programming Vision for 2016-2017 Academic Year:

Now more than ever, it is imperative for Asian Americans to vocalize how policies locally, nationally and globally will have an impact on our communities. How can we help shape our programming efforts to both support and centralize invaluable work about, for and from the Asian American community? How can we debunk the perception of Asian American passiveness and apathy? How can our programming efforts empower our current work while inspiring those to continue all the work that needs to be done?

By utilizing the theme "EmPOWERing Asian America," Michigan State University's Asian Pacific American Studies Program aims to strengthen the ongoing efforts of those currently working within the APA Studies fields and related fields, while motivating leaders and future leader to pursue scholarship, resources, and polices that focus on the value of our communities. We are actively seeking programming efforts that empower Asian America whether this is through the sharing of research and scholarship, leadership development, mentorship, arts, community outreach, activism and more. Through an intentional celebration of our accomplishments and an awareness of our struggles, we hope to define innovative ways of shaping how we are included within our American society.

CONTACT US!

Do you know of any speakers or events taking place at MSU that fit within this programming vision? The APA Studies Program would like to collaborate with other departments and organizations to create further awareness and include campus-wide programming efforts within a collective academic year calendar of events. If you want to get involved, please contact us at apaspec@msu.edu or call (517) 353-9140.
